SATURDAY, DECEMBER 19, 1903.

Let everybody rest again. Rear Admiral Schley has said, "If I were nominated for the presidency, I would not accept. If elected, I would not serve."

The Randolph Herald and News thinks that "Vermont granite is coming on fast.
Whether the stone comes from Millstone Hill, Woodbury or Bethel it all makes for the good of the state." You are right; and you might go farther and say that there is no industry in the state that is taking as big strides in development.

It has been decided in a New York state court that a person may fish in streams which have been stocked by the state; regardless of the owners of the lands through which the streams flow. The decision was in a case for trespass brought by William Rockefeller large real estate holder in the Adirondacks, against a man who was charged with fishing the stream which flows through the Rockefeller holdings. The decision is of great interest because it decides a mooted question, whether a property owner can lawfully prevent fishing in state-stocked streams which happens to run through his land. The case has, however, been appealed.

The call from the south for immigrants reminds one of the fact that the great tide of immigration which has been pouring into this country for years has not settled towards the South, but had found its place in the East and West. The South offers, however, an inducement in the line of agriculture to immigrants. Now there is a great scarcity of labor in that branch of industry because the residents of the South have been drawn towards the mills, leaving the fields without tillers. The loss is greatest through the shifting of the negroes to some other industry. Andrew Carnegie says that the South is dependent upon the eleven millions of negroes for its cotton industry. Although he may have set the figures rather high, it is certain that the South does miss its negroes when it comes to the plain necessity of one of its chief industries.

ABOUT THE STATE.

Items of Interest Gleaned From Our Exchanges.

S. C. Barlingame, a veteran of the Civil war in Co. F, 4th Vt. Inf., died at Meriden, Conn., Wednesday. The body was taken to Brattleboro where the funeral was held today.

The suit of Mrs. Emogene White, a nurse of Brattleboro, against the Central Vermont Railway Co. to recover damages for injuries sustained in an accident on the Brattleboro & Whitehall railroad last year, was settled through attorney C. C. Fitts for $3,000.

As a specimen of what Vermont air will do, J. J. Ward, a St. Louis youngster who is staying at the home of his uncle, Francis Ward in St. Albans, is a good example. The lad was sent there three months ago for his health, having suffered from malaria, weighed 51 pounds and he now weighs 83 pounds, his health being much improved.

Anthony McNeely, who was arrested about three weeks ago on the charge of having embezzled $1,400 from the Rutland Railroad Co. while acting as treasurer of the Burlington freight office, appeared before Justice of the Peace F. G. Webster December 10. He waived examination and was held for the county court in the sum of $1,000, which was furnished by J.
J. Enright, his counsel. The case will be tried at the March term of county court.
